

acid base titrations chem pdf

Acid-Base titrations are usually used to find the amount of a known acidic or basic substance through acid base reactions. The analyte (titrand) is the solution with an unknown molarity.

Titration may be performed for almost any type of chemical reaction, but one of the most prevalent uses is in acid-base reactions. The importance of acid-base reactions arises from the need to know how much acid or base is present in different samples or solutions. Titration is a quick and convenient method of learning this information. As a solution of acid is titrated with a solution of base, the concentration of the hydronium ion (H_3O^+) decreases.

Acid-Base Titration. A titration is a process used to determine the volume of a solution that is needed to react with a given amount of another substance. In this experiment, your goal is to determine the molar concentration of two acid solutions by conducting titrations with a base of known concentration.

Chemistry with Computers 24 - 1 Acid-Base Titration A titration is a process used to determine the volume of a solution needed to react with a given amount of another substance. In this experiment, you will perform 2 titrations; one using potassium acid phthalate ($\text{KHC}_8\text{H}_4\text{O}_4$)(KHP) with a basic sodium hydroxide solution, NaOH.
